What is on the GED Test?

The GED is a four-part exam. Candidates are tested in subject areas typically taught in traditional classrooms such as: reasoning through language arts, math, science, and social studies. Questions consist of multiple-choice, short answer, fill-in-the-blank, or essay formats. Because the exam requires more than seven hours of testing, many Florida centers offer it over two or three days. The test can also be taken one or two subjects at a time; passing all parts of the test results in a State of Florida High School Diploma.

How is the GED Scored and What Happens if I Don't Pass?

Each section of the GED is scored the same in all states that offer the test. You can earn a score as high as 200 on each section and a score of 145 or higher is needed to pass in Florida. A score of 170 in each section is designated as an honors diploma and is considered an indication of college and career readiness. If you do not pass the GED the first time, you can retake all or part of the exam. Florida allows each section to be taken a maximum of three times per year in English. The test is also offered in Spanish, with a limit of two attempts per year.

Who is Eligible?

According to the GED Testing Service, the GED may be given to those who are at least 18 years old if they are not enrolled in or have not graduated from, an accredited high schools. You may be granted an age waiver if you are 16 or 17 and meet certain requirements. Proof of residency is not required to take the GED in Florida (but all test-takers who take the exam in Florida receive a Florida diploma even if they reside in another state).

What if I don't have the money to pay for these classes or for the actual GED Exam?

You are encouraged to discuss this concern with your probation officer. There may be alternative programs or financial assistance available in extenuating circumstances. The need for financial assistance will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.
